DISTINCTIVE FURNITURE

There are many features that tend to make furniture distinctive and to make furniture distinctive and beautiful. The biauty of form, the proper grouping of straight lines and sharp corners, or graceful curves and rounded corners. The beauty of wood and upholstery, the harmonious blending of colors in each. The various woods themselves possess distinctive beauty—quartered oak, with its pleasing color blending; the richness in color of mahogany, and the fantastic grain markings of Circossian walnut, All these and many others enter in determining the beauty and value of furniture, and all may be found at the Pettit Store.

PERIOD FURNITURE.

The various reproductions of old style furniture, the period styles, have a sentimental association with the past which will be found difficult to analyze. The delicate and ornate carving of the Chippendale; the stately and quiet dignity of the Tudor, and the many other periods, each having a character of its own, possess a charm that is irresistible. Faithful reproductions of these masterpieces of a bygone age may be found at the Pettit Store.
